

Senators Agree To Reduce Income Tax 25 Per Cent

Republican Members of Upper House
Vote to Pass Bill—Will Also Pass
Rural School Appropriation Bill—
Anticipating Governor Will Veto

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Albany, N. Y., March 24.—There will be a 25 per cent reduction in the state income tax this year.

The night which Governor Al Smith has waged for tax reduction came to an end shortly before 2 o'clock this morning when the Republican members of the Senate at a conference, voted to pass a Republi-ators voted to report out and pass the $9,000,000 appropriation and send it to the governor. They insist his money should be appropriated this year.

A cut of 25 per cent will save the income tax payers of this state approximately $8,500,000. A similar reduction was granted to

"We decided to pass both the 25 per cent income tax resolution bill and the $9,000,000 appropriation for rural schools and let the governor take his choice," said Senator Wright, G. O. P. leader of the upper

No decision was reached at the conference on Governor Smith's proposed $300,000,000 bond issue for the removal of grade crossings. Another conference may be held tonight or tomorrow on this subject. The belief prevailed at the conference that the issue would be decided by the legislature.

day however, that the governor's plan would finally be adopted. Senator Mastick, Republican of Westchester, is the sponsor for another grade crossing amendment, similar in many respects to that proposed at the Capitol.

Under the governor's plan the railroads would pay 50 per cent of the elimination cost, the state 25 per cent and the locality the remaining per cent.

Under the Mastick plan the unit would be enlarged to include counties, as well as cities, towns and villages, leaving it to the Legislature to select the unit or units to assume the litigation and to determine the proportions they will each bear.

The Republican Objection.
The Republicans strongly objected to the governor's plan of writing into the Constitution the specified amount of money which would be compelled to pay the debt.

Post Made Thorough Job of Forgiveness

The poet Browning, Prof. William Lyon Phelps tells us in Scribner's Magazine, was as impulsive as Roosevelt. He could never speak of his wife with calmness. To illustrate his feeling about her, says Professor Phelps, Lady Ritchie, the daughter of Thackeray, told me this story.

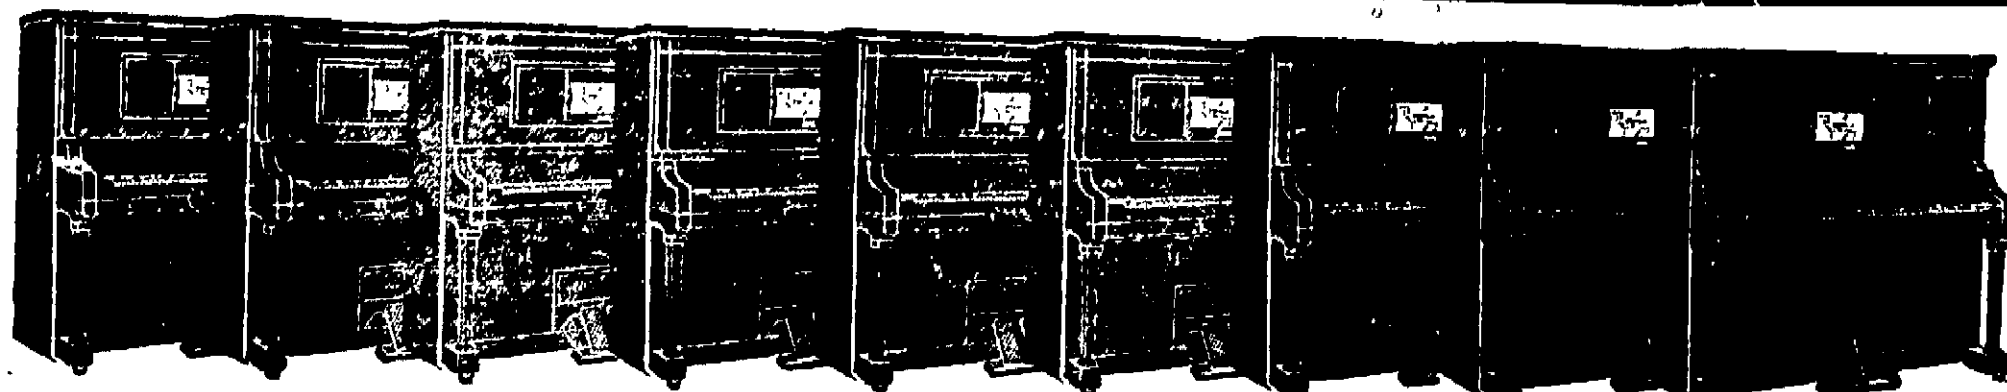

There was a rumor that Browning was going to marry again, and in his absence she mentioned it. The next day Browning heard of it in a way that made him suppose she had originated the fable. That night they met at a large dinner, and he was assigned to take her out to the dining-room. She greeted him in their customary friendly manner, took his arm and then to her amazement found that he would not speak to her, but almost spiked her with his elbow every time she turned toward him.

At dinner he devoted himself exclusively to the lady on his left, and if Anne Thackeray spoke to him he made no reply. When the ladies withdrew she asked one of them whether Robert Browning had gone mad.

"Why, don't you know?" was the reply. "He heard that you started a story of a second marriage, and he will never forgive you."

That state of affairs continued for months. They constantly met at dinner parties, but he ignored her. In the following summer she, Browning and his most intimate friend, the Frenchman Milman, were staying in the same town in Normandy. One day Milman turned on Browning and told him that he was behaving outrageously, that Anne Thackeray had never meant any harm, had merely repeated what she had heard and was now heartbroken. Browning was smitten with contrition; he immediately started running at full speed to the opposite end of the town where Miss Thackeray lodged. He must have been a cunning spectacle, for he was short and heavy and not used to running.

"I was sitting in the window of the second story in a dependent mood," Lady Ritchie told me, "when I saw Browning running violently toward my lodging. I rushed downstairs and leaped into his arms; we both cried together and had a lovely time."

Seeds of 500 Years Ago Soon to Bloom in U. S.

Chicago. — Lotus seeds, dormant since 1425, are to produce blooms in Chicago within a few months, as the result of the work of Dr. A. C. Shull, a botanist of the University of Chicago.

These seeds fell from withered plants in the Gobi desert, some decades before Columbus sailed for America. Professor Opha of John Hopkins university dug them up in Asia and presented them to Doctor Shull.

Doctor Shull points out that these seeds are the oldest in the world, so far as is known, and that they will produce a strange flower of the East, even though they have been buried in the Gobi desert since the Fifteenth century.

The seeds were found in a hard, impenetrable husk in a bed of peat, covered with pure sulphuric acid. After soaking in the acid two hours, the seeds will be planted and permitted to grow.

At one step, the new good Maxwell creates an immeasurably higher conception of the dollar's buying power in its relation to motor car speed and power.

The owner of this new good Maxwell finds in it an ability for sustained speed which wins his respect no matter how powerful the cars which he has driven before.

He becomes used to leading traffic in the city because of a flashing acceleration which is not surpassed by any car built today.

He finds himself enjoying these advantages at an operating and maintenance cost which owners declare is lower than any previous motor car experience has ever taught them to expect.

For the cause of this revolutionary achievement, credit the engineering genius which produced the Chrysler Six, the wonderful plants in which the new good Maxwell is manufactured from wheels to body, from radiator to rear axle.

In this new good Maxwell, Chrysler engineers and Maxwell's fine workmanship have advanced the ability of four cylinders beyond anything the industry had previously produced. We enthusiastically invite you to let us prove Maxwell's superior quality and value.

Psycho-Analyst May Be Deported

By Telegram to The Freeman.
 London, March 24.—Honour Tyrrell Lane, psycho-analyst, formerly of Boston and Detroit, appeared in Bow street court today charged with violating the aliens law in that he failed to register his address with the police.

It had been alleged that Lane was receiving $15,000 yearly in giving psycho-analyses consultations. It is alleged that these dealt with matters of an intimate nature.

In opening the case, the magistrate indicated the question of deportation would be considered.

The police prosecutor said that Lane's license to conduct an industrial school was revoked by the home office after complaints that Lane had adopted an over friendly attitude toward young women students.

Today We Celebrate

MARY ANNE THOMPSON.
 Mary Anne Thompson was the last wife to be sold at public auction in England, the "sale" taking place at Carlisle in April, 1832, or just about 93 years ago. She was the spouse of a farmer, Joseph Thompson, and they had been married about three years when her husband decided to sell her on the auction block. This old practice, while it never had legal sanction, had been followed in rural sections of England for centuries.

The auction commenced at noon on the appointed day. Thompson placed his wife on a large oaken chair, with a rope around her neck. He pointed out her faults and her good qualities to the assembled throng. There were few bidders, but at length she was "knocked down" to Harry Lears, who paid twenty shillings and a Newfoundland dog. Mrs. Thompson went away quite contentedly with her new owner, and is said to have lived happily with him.

THE CALIPHS.

The first of the Caliphs was Abubekr, who began his reign at Medina on this date in the year A. D. 633.

After the death of the founder of the faith a great controversy arose in Medina over the question of a successor. Abubekr, the father-in-law and friend of the Prophet, was finally chosen.

Few of the followers of the Prophet remained true, but the first Caliph proved equal to the occasion, and his armies soon vanquished the Arab rebels and brought them to their knees—or to their graves.

Abubekr died after a short reign and was succeeded by Omar, and the Caliphate was maintained in Medina until 661, but under the Ommyyads the capital was removed to Damascus. In the eighth century the Abbasides finally established the Caliphate in Baghdad, but the Ommyyads set up a rival Caliphate in Cordova.

Of the Bagdad Caliphs the most famous was Harun Al Rashid, who figures in the "Arabian Nights." A third Caliphate was established in Egypt in 909 by Obeldallah, who claimed to be descended from the Prophet's daughter, Fatima. After the sixteenth century the Turkish Sultans assumed the dignity of Caliph.

HARRISON'S CHRONOMETER.

The first chronometer was the invention of John Harrison, an Englishman, died in London 149 years ago today. Watches were first made at Nuremberg in 1447, but they were crude affairs, more like small clocks than the watches of today. Queen Elizabeth was the owner of a small table clock, sometimes referred to as a watch, which is still preserved in the Royal Institution Museum. Watches properly so called, were invented by Dr. Hooke, an Englishman, and Huyghens, a Dutchman, in the seventeenth century, but were neither ornamental nor useful. Harrison's watch was the first that was both compact and an accurate time-keeper.

He made his first time piece in 1735, the second in 1739 and his third ten years later, and shortly afterwards perfected a chronometer that procured for him the $100,000 offered by the Board of Longitude (as a reward). He also invented the first eight day clock in 1715, and it is still to be seen at the English Patent Museum. It strikes the hour, indicates the day of the month, and, with the exception of the escapement, its wheels are made entirely of wood.

THE WIDENING SILHOUETTE.

(By Eleanor Gunn.)
 The time has certainly arrived when the flare commands respect. It is no longer in the category of one who aspires to success, it has arrived.

Speaking generally, fewer models in the pencil or narrow silhouette have been shown than last season, in Paris. A great many dresses are straight, and all suit skirts, likewise, but the first are apt to be finely pleated, and the last, if they have no inverted pleat or a panel of box or knife pleats at front, are wrapped, so that the open flap breaks the narrow silhouette as the wearer moves.

Some of the new suits suggest the tunic outline by reason of their rather long and slightly flaring peplums, although most of them have either smoothly fitting hip length jackets or seven-eighths length straight ones.

Suits with flare peplums suggest Directoire inspiration in some instances, and both O'Rosen and Melnotte Simonin frankly admit the influence of that period for the fancy models that they show. Lucile continues to draw upon China, sometimes for the cut of a tunic, and Nicole Groult uses Persian embroideries, but for the most part, period influence is negligible.

Ruether Should Have Good Year

"Dutch" Ruether Paid Own Bills to Cure His Arm—Contained in Washington and Will Probably Have Fine Year.

by Telegram to The Freeman. Tampa, Fla., March 24.—An adequate idea of just how seriously Walter "Dutch" Ruether, left-handed, and not such a bad fellow at that, is taking his attempted comeback with the Washington Senators is illustrated by a pre-season debate which occurred between the young man and Clark Griffith, his present employer, over the matter of how much or how little salary he was to receive this season.

Incidentally, it furnishes an interesting sidelight on the real character of Ruether, who has been accused, often unjustly of all manner of minor offenses against baseball discipline.

For example, critics accounted for Ruether's failure to pitch up to form with the Dodgers last year by declaring that Ruether didn't take care of himself. Nothing could be further from the truth. He couldn't win because he injured his pitching arm. And (therein lies our tale.

At Own Expense. It starts with the receipt by Ruether of a Washington contract, calling for considerably less money than Ruether received in 1924. He felt he had a justifiable squawk, but only under certain conditions.

He mentioned them in his return letter to Griffith. In it he told the Washington owner that he planned to go to Hot Springs at his own expense weeks before the other pitchers. He would take the baths, he said, in an effort to cure the ailing arm, and would then try it out. If it proved to be all right, he felt he was entitled to more money. If it didn't, he wasn't worth anything to the Washington club. He concluded the letter by saying that, in such an event, he would retire from baseball altogether and advised Griffith that he would then be entitled to the return of the purchase money paid for his (Ruether's) release.

Arm in Shape. Eventually the arm rounded into shape, and Ruether got the contract for which he asked. But that is more or less beside the point.

His straightforward letter proved a bull's-eye with Griffith and Stanley Harris, and they are enthusiastic about the left-hander, both from a personal and playing standpoint.

Ruether, for his part, is really content for the first time since he made the rifle in the major leagues back in 1917.

"I had no idea there was a manager in baseball like Stanley Harris," Ruether said the other day. "There is nothing I wouldn't do for that boy."

SAM MANDELL LIKES HIS OWN HOME TOWN

When Streets Are Paved in Rockford They Will Be Best in World.

Sammy Mandell, whose victory over Sid Terris in Madison Square Garden gave him the unofficial title of world's lightweight champion, is a youngster just in his twenties. He will not tell you just how young he is because he wants to be old.

He was born in a small town in Albania and was brought to the United States with two brothers and two sisters before he was old enough to remember anything about the trip. The family settled in Rockford, Ill.

Mandell was given a high school education and intended to become a lawyer, but found in the gymnasium, where he played basketball, that he could box and, as he says, "I just turned into a boxer, I guess."

The youngster boasts that he is a small-town boy. He insists that Rockford is the capital of the world. The best suits a man can buy, he claims, are for sale in Rockford. The best bread in the world is made in Rockford and when the streets are paved Rockford will have the best streets in the world.

Sammy's favorite story is of his first experience in a New York barber shop when he wouldn't say "na" to the barber. He got a check for $5 when he got out of the chair and he hasn't been in a barber chair in New York since then.

"I'm making a lot of money now and I'm saving it," Mandell says. "I'm helping my family along and maybe sometime I'll have one and I want to be able to keep it in case I'm not thinking about a family now, though."

Youthful Gridders Come From Fighting Blood

On the football team of the Mercersburg academy, which won all of its games last season and did not have its goal line crossed, there played two boys who come from first-class fighting ancestry. The left end on the team was George Cable Miles of Miles City, Mont. This lad is a great-great-nephew of Gen. Nelson A. Miles, formerly the head of the American army, but now retired. General Miles is eighty-five years of age. His young relative played a star game on the Mercersburg team.

The other lad is Henry H. Scott, Jr., of Flushing L. I. He is a grandson of the late Rear Admiral Sampson, who reached distinction in the Spanish war as commander of one of our great fleets.

Young Scott's father, Capt. Henry H. Scott, was recently retired from the regular army. Scott played a superb game as halfback on the Mercersburg team. He is a lad of powerful build and can throw the forward pass from the middle of the field to the goal line. This boy inherits from his ancestors a courageous heart.

Not so long ago two bulldogs were fighting on the campus. Scott grabbed each dog by the collar, deliberately held them off the ground, pulled them apart and broke up the fight. Both Miles and Scott are preparing to enter Princeton.

Borg Lowers Own Mark

Arne Borg, Sweden's premier swimmer, lowered his own half-mile world's record for free style swimming in a tank when he swam the 800 yards in 10:30.46. His new mark is one and four-fifths seconds faster than his old record of 10:35.35.

Clouters With Cleveland

Considering only those who took part in at least 100 games, Cleveland placed three players in the first ten hitters last season. They were Jameson, Speaker and Merritt.

Jameson finished next to Ruth, clouting the ball for a mark of 300; Speaker batted 304 and Merritt 302. Speaker tied with Goss of Washington for seventh place, while Merritt just got inside the select group.

Speckhouse, Cleveland utility man, also did well, hitting 271, but only appeared in 71 games. Other 300 clouters on the Indians' roster included Shute, 318; Joe Sewell, 319; Burns, 319 and Chis, 308.

Two Were For Red Sox. The Red Sox defeated the M. A. S. in two games, the first on the lower diamond, 28 to 27, and the second on the Red Sox's diamond 30 to 0. Henry Houshaguer and John Swain scored the first game by each.
